

SETH C. FULTON

Associate

Seth Fulton is an associate at Hancock Daniel, where he advocates for healthcare providers through complex medical malpractice litigation. "Each client is unique and should receive analysis tailored to their issues. Having a thorough understanding of every client's story is the best way to advocate for their defense."

Seth has experience in providing litigation defense in the areas of medical malpractice, products liability, premises liability, and personal injury. He has successfully defended clients via trial advocacy and motions to dismiss.

Prior to joining Hancock Daniel, Seth interned with the Department of Health and Human Services where he analyzed and drafted orders for administrative law judges in the Medicare appeals department. He attended the University of Richmond where he focused his area of study to prepare for the litigation of complex medical issues and received his J.D. from the University of Richmond School of Law. Seth is licensed to practice law in Tennessee and Virginia.

Before attending law school, Seth taught courses in the Republic of Korea where he prepared international students for enrollment in American Universities. He is an enthusiastic outdoors man and enjoys kayaking and hiking.
