

SABIRA KHAN

Associate

Sabira Khan is an associate at Hancock Daniel, where she advises clients on antitrust matters related to corporate transactions and regulatory compliance. Sabira counsels clients across all disciplines of antitrust enforcement, including merger control, joint venture formation, government investigations, civil antitrust litigation, and antitrust compliance. "Healthcare transactions are met with significant antitrust scrutiny and it is my goal to engage with regulators, economists, and industry experts to help clients navigate a rapidly evolving regulatory environment."

Sabira has worked on several transactions in highly regulated industries to help clients obtain antitrust clearance. She has significant experience guiding clients through the Hart-Scott-Rodino (HSR) process and helps clients navigate Second Requests and Civil Investigative Demands (CID) from the FTC and DOJ. She has experience analyzing mergers to identify potential antitrust risk early in the deal process and crafting practical remedies to mitigate such risk. In addition to her merger work, Sabira has represented clients in civil and criminal antitrust investigations brought by both federal and state antitrust enforcers. "Through my investigations work, I have developed a strong understanding of the technical underpinnings of the antitrust frameworks, which allows me to help clients proactively develop appropriate compliance programs." Sabira has also represented plaintiffs and defendants in private antitrust litigation. She has represented purchasers in various pharmaceutical pay-for-delay antitrust litigations, represented plaintiffs in the sham patent prosecution case Pharmavite LLC v. Bausch and Lomb Incorporated et al., and represented defendants in the financial services industry in a lawsuit brought by the Consumer Protection Bureau of the FTC.

Prior to joining Hancock Daniel, Sabira was a counsel and an associate at two international law firms based in Washington, D.C. She also served as a law clerk to Judge William J. Martinez on the United States District Court for the District of Colorado.
